Summer Reading Program: Impact Stories

Esmé began attending the Summer Reading Program in 2015. She was 7-years-old and not yet reading independently. She made the jump to reading on her own that first summer, and was excited and motivated to continue.

This summer was Esmé's third year in the summer reading program, and each year she has made significant gains. Her mom says, "I appreciate everything about the program, and in particular, I appreciate that instilling a love of reading is a priority."

Isaac was hired as a program aide for the summer reading program with the goal of developing his leadership skills. Isaac continued as a program aide in our after-school Science Club. He began to take on more responsibility, leading projects, teaching larger groups of children, and the kids loved him.

"Speaking with the parents at the end of the program really helped me feel a sense of belonging. I believe my presentation skills got better through this program as well as my people skills."

Herbert is an entering 6th grader who did not like reading prior to the program. His parents were concerned that his reading skills were not at grade level.

Over the course of the six weeks, Herbert's reading fluency increased by 23% (five times the expected growth). Perhaps even more important is that Herbert now enjoys reading. When we asked him what he was most proud about, he said that for the first time in his life he liked and finished an entire book on his own. His mom says, "Herbert enjoyed every minute of this program."
